

I ask you not to do anything that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law. I used to get 5-10 calls per day; now I get maybe one a week. The most irritating thing about them was their use of multiple-dialers so that they talk to the first one who answers; more than half the time I would get to the phone before 4 rings (when my answering service kicks in) to find nobody there. When I did get there first I would tell them to red-line my name but there always seemed to be a new company selling the same thing. They also seem to have a very loose interpretation of "prior customer". Phone spam is even more irritating than email spam.
